

Please reconsider the plans to deregulate ownership of media outlets. Allowing the same company to provide news in all of its current manifestations; tv, radio and print, certainly limits the viewpoints an individual is likely to encounter. It may be an effective bottom line strategy but the government shouldn't see only the bottom line for a company as its goal. The government's goal should be for an imformed citizenry. It should continue to provide for communities being able to hear multiple views on the news from different sources. I very strongly oppose relaxing the rules allowing one company to own both print and media outlets in a single city.
